Health Department,
New York, Sept. 21-10 A. M.
Official:
No cases of cholera have appeared in this city since the last bulletin.

EMMONS CLARK, Secretary.

No new cases of cholera were reported in this city or on the detained steamships down the bay this morning.

There have been no new cases discovered in the camp at Sandy Hook.

Passengers of the steamship Moravia are expected to be landed at Hoboken and Eastern Island today.

Several European steamships arrived this morning, but none brought steerage passengers, and all report no sickness on board.

Quarantine is to be raised to-day on seven suspected houses in this city.

HEALTH BOARD IS HOPEFUL.

Suppressed Houses To-Day.

There was almost an absolute dearth of cholera news at the office of the Health Board this morning. President Wilson was at his desk at 9 o'clock, and declared that, so far as he knew, the outlook was particularly bright, and he hoped to have the remainder of the week without any news of cholera.

Dr. Roberts, chief of the Bureau of Contagious Diseases, was the first to confer with President Wilson, and after he made his report of the suspicious cases investigated in the morning, he was followed by Dr. Cyrus Edson, Sanitary Superintendent, who received his instructions regarding the enforcement of sanitary regulations.

At 10 o'clock Gen. Clark, the Secretary of the Board, took up this morning's bulletin.

TO AN EVENING WORLD reporter then, Clark said that the reports of the biologists in the cases of canal-boat Capt. Carr, who died at New Brunswick from supposed cholera Sunday; John Knox, the fireman on the State of Nevada, and Louis Weinhaus, of 14 First street, who is now in the Reception Hospital, were expected to-day, and it was believed that they would show that the men did not have cholera.

Dr. Roberts said this morning that reports of suspicious cases requiring investigation are still coming in, and his inspectors have their hands full in determining whether they are or are not cholera.

but he did not think they would turn out to be cholera. One patient was Mary Murphy, who was found suffering at 63 Cherry street. The other was Henry Engel, who was taken from the house 14 First street, where Louis Weinbagen, the coachman, was found last Monday night. A semi-quarantine

Following are the houses designated:

1625 Madison avenue, where Edward Hoppe died.

1764 second avenue, where Mrs. Carlotta Beck died.

One of the cases reported for investigation to the Bureau of Contagious Diseases was old, who was found sick at midnight at Eleventh street and Second avenue by a policeman. An ambulance surgeon from Bellevue hospital refused to take him and notified the Health Board. Inspector Bryant went on the call.

The Case of Yee Chew Wah.
The room at 14 Mott street, where the Chinaman Yee Chew Wah died, is under strict quarantine to-day. The two roommates of Wah are not permitted to leave their apartment, nor are the other tenants in the house.

"Yee Chew Wah," said Police Capt. Warts to an EVENING WORLD reporter, "was an inveterate opium smoker, and the chances are that his death was due more to that habit than to cholera. His death seems to have had

About two weeks ago Yee Chaw Wah began to complain of diarrhoea. He did not, however, think the matter serious enough to call in a doctor until yesterday morning, when Dr. Wilson, of 69 Park street, was summoned. Even then Wah's sickness was unabated.

The body, bedding and other effects were removed three hours later to the hospital at the foot of East Sixteenth street.
